AMUSEMENTS FOR HALLOWEEN NIGHT, WHICH COMES THIS WEEK.

A Number of the Buds That Are Out This Season-A Kindergar-

Next Saturday night will be All Halloween, and, as usual, there will be ever so many informal parties. The young people are reading about all the superstitions attached to the festival and asking innumerable questions of the parents and grand, parents as to what they used to do to celebrate the event. Just before the parties begin, there is much to be done, pumpkins, nuts and apples to buy, mirrors to borrow, tubs and pails to get out, and as the hour approaches they have to be filled with water. One of the best entertainers to have son who can do tricks. Next to this is a person who can tell fortunes by palmistry r cards, and another who can tell "spooky" stories. A ghost dance is a good half hour's amusement. Have the room only lighted by candles, and those who dance dressed in sheets, or a regular square dance by all present, and no calls for figures, everything quiet. Shadow pictures make another good amusement. To make the entertainment interesting there should be considerable mystery about it. Refreshments may not be limited to cake and cream, as on ordinary occasions, but they must be nuts, apples, doughnuts, cider, pumpkin ple, cookies and home-made fare entirely. A real surprise for midnight, when the clock strikes (and there should be a striking clock in the house) completes the entertainment.

There are a number of charming "buds" to make their social debut this season. Some of them are to have teas or receptions given to formally introduce them. and others are to dispense with this function and simply accompany their mothers to the large afternoon receptions to become acquainted with the older ladies. There are rumors of numerous debut parties to occur just before the holidays, after the Flower Mission fair is over and before Christmas day. Some will not be given until January. Among the "buds" of the season are Miss Ella Dorothea Van Camp, Miss Katherine Virginia Walcott, Miss Daisy Patterson Malott, Miss Jeannette Judson, Miss Adelaide Fairbanks, Miss Kate Smith, Miss Ruth Nicholas, Miss Julia Hollweg, Miss Alice Higgins, Miss Corella Taylor, Miss Katherine Winter, Miss Alma Haerle, Miss Edith Wallick, Miss Annie Butler, Miss Helen Holman, Miss Josephine Holman, Miss Susan Chipman, Miss Nellie Carnahan, Miss Florence Atkins, Miss Bessie Lee Webb, Miss Anna Spann, Miss Ida Osgood, Miss Helen Armstrong, Miss Maud Smith, Miss Stella Adams, Miss Mary Ransdell, Miss Jeannette Herron, Miss Florence Taggart, Miss Lois Dyer, Miss Julia Spades, Miss Helen Seaton, Miss Harriet Tutewiler, Miss Mary Reaume, Miss Laura Huey, Miss Clara Haueisen, Miss Percy Walker and Miss Edith Bingham.

At several recent social functions in this city a few belles have worn dresses with rows of suffles on the skirts, an old-fashioned mode that seems to be revived. Dresses of their grandmothers can be worn by some girls with great effect, as there is a sweet quaint style about them that appeals to the artistic eye. Then there are other girls who would do well not to take to this ultra fashion. Most all of these gowns that have thus far appeared in Indianapolis have been well chosen, and there is a probability of the style prevailing to

The programme of the Portfolio Club for this season was issued yesterday and is very artistic. The paper used is the charcoal drawing paper in two tones of gray and the printing is in red and black ink. the names of the months being in the former color and the initials also. The leaves are held together with rough cord. A number of the pages are adorned with original sketches by members of the club. in half-tones printed on rice paper and pasted to the page. The one for the title page is by William Forsyth, who also has a figure. There is a child sketch by Otto Stark, a head by Miss Julia G. Sharpe and one by Miss Alice N. Woods. The last page has an original architectural decoration drawn by Louis H. Sullivan, of Chicago. A unique feature of the whole is an original line of music by Oliver Willard Pierce, in facsimile. The book equals in artistic merit the literary, music and art programmes which have been arranged by the club for the year. The first meeting was Oct. 15 and was an informal reception. The remainder of the programme are as
